The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered in jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically. “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper. Aunt Polly tells him about his adventures. During supper, Aunt I. junks the idea of Tom going to be shipped school that afternoon and says tomorrow instead. Aunt Polly has put her heart and hopes into Tom. Tom’s half-brother, Huck Finn, is still away from home, but Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom has assured the aunt himself to disguise his absence from school.

Tom goes out of the house in the afternoon, enchantedly. Greenwhistle. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg again, he meets his friend, Joe Harper, whom he had never seen in so long. Tom and the new arrival come to see Tom’s old friend, Ben Rogers, and eventually choose the newcomer as the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of missile. Jim almost agree, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.

Tom goes out at suppertime and is soon approached by Pete Doxey, who has just been expelled from school for breaking a window. Pete tells Tom that he will be dropped school that afternoon and was considering hanging himself in the schoolyard and hoping to be shot, or going into the village and asking the bear and deer to shoot him. Tom, hearing this, assures Aunt Polly that he will make sure Pete doesn't attempt suicide.
