The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects painfully on Tom’s misconduct and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper with his apron around him. He is wearing a new linen shirt, but it is all wrinkled and crooked and questionable. No one has heard from him, nor has the schoolmaster. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Tom’s half-brother, Huckleberry Finn, has heard of his doings and is laughing. Tom has sworn the boy to keep his secret. Tom and the new arrival sit down to dinner.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his disheveled clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of suitcase. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Tom comes home at supper-time. He has just come from school and bragged that he had been skipped school that afternoon and went over to the Atwater farm, but Sid, Tom's half-brother, has just found out about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly reveals that her husband has been invited to the Atwater farm for the afternoon and evening. Tom is pleased, but Aunt Polly warns him to be good and behave himself. Tom assures her that he will be good and behave himself.

Tom goes out of the house into the garden and starts to whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom sees a canary and decides to throw it into the river. However, the canary's owner, Mr. Wardle, spots it and claims it as his own. Tom, in a fit of anger, kicks the canary to the ground and eventually chases the newcomer all the way home.
