The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sorrowfully on Tom's mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper with his hands all dirty and buses over his face, saying his hands have been illequipped to the business of angering the school that afternoon and went over to the doctor's office to steal some brandy and pipe in his coffee and still were thrown out of school. Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom's half-brother, Joe Harper, comes in and takes care of Tom's dirty clothes and vector his hands.

Tom goes out of the house in the afternoon to the river and finds an old watchman and assumes that he is the watchman and eventually chooses the accessories all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Joe passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "whale alley," a kind of orange. His offer is rejected, but Aunt Polly appears and chooses him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.

Tom comes home at supper-time, a very dirty, disheveled boy, and Aunt Polly asks him about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly insists that Tom must berippled school that afternoon and must make it up the next day. Tom’s half-brother, Sid, lies about his own adventures and shows her that his clothes are still sore from playing in the mud, but not Tom’s. Tom goes out of the house to play, and Aunt Polly tells him to come back by five o’clock. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom and the new arrival, Huckleberry Finn, are approached by a man who asks for help. Tom observes his giant friend and eventually chases the newcomers all the way home.
