Trauma And The Memory Of Politics
The novel opens with Aunty Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunty Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunty Polly reflects ruefully on Tom's mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper-time. Flickering candlelight reveals how well he has done about his lessons. During supper, Aunty Polly tells Tom that he must be delivered from school this afternoon and must make a real effort to learn his lessons. Tom's mother is in Boston, and she has left Tom with his Aunt Polly, who is not entirely pleased with him. Tom has learned the art of eluding houses and has spent the evening by the river, fishing. Tom has no interest in his lessons, and his Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom goes out of the house in a huff. He is not used to being whipped. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, he overhears a conversation between two boys about a secret society. Tom is eager to join and eventually chooses the newcomers as his new friends.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunty Polly makes Tom go to whitewash the fence. Jon passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "worse job," a kind of service. Jon almost agrees, but Aunty Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.

Tom comes home at supper and there is no sign of Aunt Polly. She must have gone to find Tom. Tom asks about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly says that Tom will be skipped school that afternoon and what remains of the day he will have to work in the observatory and clean his room and wash the dishes. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Sadie, Tom’s half-sister, is not. Tom decides to absent himself to disguise his absence from school, but Sadie tells Aunt Polly that Tom is on the backstairs. Tom comes to the observatory and eventually chases the astronomer all the way home.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterush the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of muzzle. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.
Memory is described by psychology as the ability of an organism to store, retain, and subsequently retrieve information. When an individual experiences a traumatic event, whether physical or psychological, their memory can be affected in many ways. For example, trauma might affect their memory for that event, memory of previous or subsequent events, or thoughts in general.

A trauma trigger is a psychological stimulus that prompts recall of a previous traumatic experience. The stimulus itself need not be frightening or traumatic and may be only indirectly or superficially reminiscent of an earlier traumatic incident, such as a scent or a piece of clothing. Triggers can be subtle and difficult to anticipate.

Over 6 lakh people became homeless across 182 talukas. Nearly 2.15 lakh buildings turned to rubble. In this worst-ever human tragedy, Kutch district accounted for 81.5 per cent of the injuries.

Parenting a Child Who Has Experienced Trauma

The Repressed Memory Debate. Anyway, Freud's speculative theories have today been taken up in the context of allegations of childhood sexual abuse; i.e., when an older child or adult suddenly "remembers" having been abused in childhood by some particular person, usually a parent. The camps are clearly divided here, some saying that these things happen all the time and that they reflect ...
